Run Probabilities

Serkan Eryılmaz
İzmir University of Economics

Given a sequence of different elements (or trials) a run of a certain type of element is an uninterrupted sequence of such elements bordered at each end by other types of elements. In this talk the run probabilities for random binary sequences are presented using traditional combinatorial approach. The results are also extended to random sequences consisting of multi-state trials.